ATLANTA – October 13, 2026 – UniPro Foodservice, Inc. is pleased to announce that Community Provisions, a Southern California-based distributor specializing in fresh produce and specialty goods, has joined the cooperative as its newest Member.

Known for its commitment to quality, personalized service, and strong relationships with local growers and producers, Community Provisions serves restaurants, hospitality operators, and culinary professionals throughout Southern California. The company connects chefs with exceptional ingredients while supporting the producers and artisans who contribute to the region's dynamic food culture.

Combining a fresh approach to food sourcing with a longstanding commitment to customer service, Community Provisions has built its business around delivering quality products, dependable service, and meaningful partnerships.

“We are pleased to welcome Community Provisions to the UniPro family,” said Ed Delaney, Senior Vice President of Business Development & Integration for UniPro Foodservice. “Their commitment to quality, strong customer relationships, and support of local producers reflects the entrepreneurial spirit of independent foodservice distribution. We look forward to working alongside their team to support their continued growth and success.”

As a UniPro Member, Community Provisions gains access to the cooperative's extensive Supplier network, competitive purchasing programs, and business-building resources to compete more effectively in today's foodservice marketplace.
